

Advisory Review for Residential Associate Members

All associates have the opportunity to request an Advisory Review. It provides you the opportunity to have an independent and helpful work review. The intent is educational; to provide counseling and ultimately help you understand some of the requirements for the final level experience review. There is no fee, however you must submit an application. The application should be accompanied by the reports you choose to be reviewed. A Residential Associate may choose 5 reports.

During Advisory Review a national Screener looks at your work and provides counseling and feedback. You choose reports for the review. You might choose regular reports for general feedback, or you could choose a specialty property report where you want to receive specific input.

You may choose to have an Advisory Review (or more than one) at any time prior to submitting for Final Level Experience Credit. The work chosen for Advisory Review cannot also be chosen as the subject for final level review, however the hours can apply for final level credit. Also, if you are denied full or partial credit, you may submit for another Advisory Review as long as it is before a re-submission for final level credit.
